To the Dean of the Faculty, James L. Godfrey

I have the honor to submit my first annual report as University Librarian, for the period between July 1, 1957 and June 30, 1958, the 163d year of the University Library's history.

The historical record of the University and its Library will mark this year as a period of notable change. With a wholly new Administration, both the University and the Library inevitably have been exposed to new eyes and new views on old problems. For the Library this has been highly salutary, and many of the Library's difficulties of years past have been dissolved away in the wash of progressive academic administration.

The several recent years have been marked particularly as years of growth, emphasizing the collections. This year will add to the steady development of collections, but should also be recorded as a period especially significant for the reorganization of personnel and physical resources, in anticipation of increased service loads of the future. The University Administration, the Administrative Board of the Library, the Faculty, the Library staff, the Student Library Committee have all devoted many hours of concentrated attention to the grave problems, present and future, of the University Library. Any success we may have in meeting these problems and carrying our share of the load will be due in large measure to the thoughtful and unselfish consideration all of these people have given to our work. Words cannot adequately express my appreciation to these, my colleagues. Let me say only that without this collaboration, any progress would be impossible.

The major changes of the year will be reported in some detail later; briefly noted, the staffing of the Art, Botany and Zoology libraries has been improved and the collections formerly served in Psychology and in Alumni Hall have been brought back into the Wilson Library. The functions and materials of the former Business Administration and Economics Library have been combined with other Social Sciences library materials in a new Business Administration and Social Sciences Division. The Reference Department has become the Humanities Division, with added materials and functions, including a reconstituted Bibliography Alcove. The net effect of these changes has been to strengthen the library service in the physical sciences outside of Wilson and to consolidate materials and personnel services in the two major divisions served in Wilson, the Humanities and the Social Sciences. Secondary, but no less important gains, were made in the establishment of an Undergraduate Library and increased Reserve Reading space, all on the first floor of the Wilson Library.

In personnel management and operations, there has been a considerable reduction of independent and poorly coordinated operations together with closer direction of subordinate personnel by responsible supervisors. Much of the personnel planning of my predecessor, Dr. Andrew Horn, has been confirmed or completed in the course of this year. Some simplifications are completed or under-way which will result in fewer administrative personnel with increased numbers available for operations.

In the management of resources, the fact that the Technical Processes department has been able to keep its head above water is a major triumph. Additional funds for books were not accompanied by funds for the personnel needed to carry out the ordering and cataloging; thus, the additional load was absorbed by the present staff. Some aid was found in your Administration's authorization to increase the Wages account by transfer, and major gains were made in the broader use of sub-professional and clerical help wherever practical.

This has been a trying year for many. The very considerable changes represented briefly above have not in every instance been readily accepted, nor has every change had time to prove itself. It is my belief that time will ease all the strains of the unfamiliar, and that the University Library will eventually be a better place for all.

I could not close this brief introduction to the detailed report without recording my own deep appreciation of your valued and wise counsel throughout this, my first year in this office. New faces and new ways require great flexibility in personal adjustment, and without your ready aid, my work would have been infinitely more difficult. For the warm understanding and cooperation of the Chancellor and other administrative officials, I shall be eternally grateful. For the helpful advice and guidance of the Administrative Board, I count myself among the most fortunate. Such success as our Library may have will be first of all a tribute to the attentions of all of these and to diligent, devoted members of the staff. I commend to your attention the detail of their work in the following text and appendices.

SERVICES

Among the various measures of a library's usefulness, the record of items circulated is one of the least reliable. It cannot show the unrecorded use of materials in the Library, the ease or difficulty of access, the adequacy of the collections to the need, or many other more critical measures. However, the figures of use do tell something when compared yearly over a period of time. The total recorded volumes circulated during the year was 434,959, a figure to compare with 469,941 the year before. Reference to Appendix VII reveals a drop of approximately 21,000 in the General College Library, 3,000 in the Reserve Reading Room and 11,000 in the Business Administration and Economics Library. It would be simple but pointless to explain the changes in use; from the figures available it is obvious that our books are working hard. It is expected that the new physical arrangement will result in increased use in place, possibly less outside use.

The Circulation Department has carried on its regular program of collections control, including inventory and searching. The recorded loss of books this year was down to 334, only about one third of last year's figure. The major change in this department's activity was the concentrated shift in June of massive parts of the collections to accommodate the new reading rooms and to absorb external collections moving in. The collections which comprise the Psychology Library and the Alumni Hall Library were all brought back into Wilson with the sole exception of Planning materials. The Library collections which comprised the Business Administration and Economics Library were reincorporated into the general collections with the more active parts joining the other Social Sciences in the newly combined Business Administration and Social Sciences Division on the second floor. The General College Library collections were moved into the newly established Undergraduate Library to form the basis for building up a complete separate Undergraduate Library collection over the next few years. When the new Undergraduate Library building is available, its collection should be ready to move in. Miss Lucy took good advantage of the general move to relocate whole areas of stack materials for easier access and to anticipate needed expansion space in some fields.

At the same time, the staffs of the newly organized Humanities Division and of the Business Administration and Social Sciences Division undertook the rearrangement of physical assets and library materials for their respective fields. The task was virtually completed by the end of June. The forthcoming year will give the new arrangement a rugged shakedown period, and we may well be able to increase the Library's usefulness as a result of this experience.

Two minor moves, Maps and Microfilms, were made to facilitate access and improve control of these specialized types of material. All Maps were relocated within the former Graphic Arts area and all materials on microfilm were moved into the Manuscripts area stacks. Both activities were assigned for management to Dr.

Patton and his staff. Miss Lena Mae Williams has joined this staff as Maps Librarian, with the assignment of organizing and developing a broad public service of our scattered map resources.

The extensive collection of duplicates has been reduced slightly during the year by transfers to eleven other libraries near and far. We have made these available to local and nearby libraries first and then to all others. There are still over 15,000 duplicates remaining on the first stack level. Continuing efforts will be made to place these books where they may be useful. The new Chapel Hill Public Library now has first choice.

The general pattern of circulation reported by Miss Lucy shows an increase in outside use of 15 percent. This may be attributed to larger enrollment and an increased number of books available. More duplicate copies are being ordered, but we are still far from meeting the needs for numbers. As student numbers increase, more of our book funds will be needed for added copies; only a change in teaching method can ease this problem. The Circulation department notes also increasing traffic problems as the volume of material use and the numbers of students increase. The proposed Undergraduate Library Building is the only adequate and certain cure for most of these problems of numbers.

The Reference Department reports continued heavy demands at the service desks. It is very difficult to measure by numbers the character of reference service rendered. The best test is the general public opinion of the services available. Miss Hall and her staff are highly regarded by the faculty and students; the adequacy of the reference collections appears to be quite satisfactory. We are all greatly concerned about the nearly impossible lighting problems of this room, particularly since the late hours use is very heavy. The correction of this problem involves a major expenditure which must be faced soon.

The Reference Department continued its service of borrowing on Inter-Library Loan, handling 1345 titles. The staff also conducted its regular program of new student orientation lectures, as well as providing special library lectures when requested.

As a part of the conversion from Reference Department to Humanities Division, additional shelving was brought in to accommodate some 800 periodicals of the Humanities. Other shelving designed to establish a Bibliography alcove at the North end of the room increased the volume capacity by 140 shelves. The North Carolina Union Catalog was re-located within this alcove as the primary bibliographic resource of the whole region.

The new Interlibrary Center has been in operation for six months. Established officially on January 15, 1958, the Center combines all interlibrary and off-campus borrowing and lending activities of the Library. Some of the activities of the Extension Department were taken over by the Center, some were discontinued, and others will gradually disappear. The Interlibrary Center will serve libraries by acting as an Information Center rather than by serving individuals directly.

The organization of the Center and its work have been very closely coordinated with the related work of the State Library and the Committee on Cooperative Library Resources of the State Library Association. With their aid, an active resurgence of interest in the North Carolina Union Catalog has brought in very important new representation from other libraries. The Asheville Public Library has sent in the Pack Memorial and Sondley Reference Library cards; the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, American Enka, and Camp LeJeune have provided copies of their cards; a large number of public libraries have initiated or increased their reporting to the Union Catalog, including Rowan County, Salisbury, Winston-Salem and Forsyth County, Sheppard Memorial, Greenville, Cumberland County, Fayetteville and Wilmington. This Union Catalog represents the finest bibliographic resource tool of the entire Southeastern region; it will be a critical factor in establishing our place in the National bibliographical planning which is inevitable in the near future.

The administrative responsibility for the Bull's Head Bookshop and for the Library's Photographic Services has been assigned to the Interlibrary Center. Mr. I. T. Littleton, moving from Assistant Librarian for Personnel to Director of the Center, has very ably guided the first steps of this youthful organization. The effect of combining the three units is to place under his direction the primary responsibility for all services of our library off the campus and particularly to the state. Through one or another of these units, we are able to serve well those residents of our state who cannot otherwise make use of our considerable resources.

The growth and services of the North Carolina Collection continue to make it one of the outstanding elements of our library. The numbers of local users and the steadily increasing number of inquiries by mail indicates the ever-widening influence of the Collection and its staff. This year's circulation approached the 10,000 mark; 2560 questions were received, including 605 by correspondence.

The work of the Southern Historical Collection, while mainly concerned with collecting and organization, served the needs of 940 registered patrons and 225 other persons whose inquiries came through the mails. Researchers came from a varied range of educational and research institutions in all parts of the country.

Nearly 500 research inquiries were served in the Rare Book Room this year and three times that number visited simply to browse among beautiful and rare books. A major service was accomplished during the year in the restudy and replanning of the contents and services of the Rare Book Room. Four major collections, the Burton Emmett First Editions, the Hoyt Collection, the Little Hanes Collection, and the Private Press Collection, were thoroughly screened and cataloged. Late in the year the Shaw Collection was moved into the area for Rare Book Room supervision. These actions were only preparatory to the enlargement of the Rare Book service area to enable its staff to serve all types of book materials which must be closely supervised. At the same time, the forthcoming year should see the consolidation of all such materials, now scattered in various parts of the Library building.

GROWTH AND ORGANIZATION OF THE COLLECTIONS

The Collections of the University Library reached a new high level of 935,014 volumes, representing an increase for the year of 36,597. The latter figure represents our present normal increase, including currently incoming gifts and purchases. The Crash program for listing under short-cataloging methods of a mass of previously unrecorded gift material has been necessarily given up to enable the staff to keep up with current materials in the general collections, the library now has bibliographic control of all the materials formerly considered for the crash program. Currently received purchases and gifts are moving regularly through the processing department without excessive delays or backlogging.

It would be impossible to report all of the notable items or collections added to the Library. Among the items obtained by the Library during 1957-58 the following four are especially noteworthy: the monumental collection of Acta sanctorum, the publication of which was begun in 1643 by the Bollandists, a group of Jesuits in Flanders. Seventy-one huge tomes, covering the days of the year from January 1st to November 3rd have so far been issued and the project is being actively continued. In this work, the lives and activities of all saints and many Christian churchmen, as well as legends referring to them, are described in detail. It is a mine of information not only for church historians, but for any medievalist. Considerable portions of the publications of both the Gottingen and Heidelberg academies have been acquired. These contain a huge amount of materials of singular importance for scholars working in any of the academic disciplines represented at the University of North Carolina. Another similarly important publication whose acquisition has been started and of which substantial portions were obtained, is the Jahrbücher für Philologie und Pädagogik. This periodical which was issued in Germany under varying titles from 1826 until 1942 contains numerous contributions by the principal scholars from all over the world which are recognized as fundamental in the study of classical and modern philology, literatures, history, and education. It should be noted that in the case of the preceding items the Library has committed itself to complete, as far and as fast as possible, the acquisition of these series. The same holds for the subsequently mentioned titles whenever the Library's present holdings are incomplete.

The following items, although they doubtlessly deserve to be called outstanding acquisitions, are somewhat less general in their coverage and more devoted to special fields of interest: The Mitteilungen of the Archäologisches Institut des Deutschen Reichs published in Rome since 1886 (Greek, Roman, and Etruscan archaeology, history, art); the bulletin (Sbornik) of the Russian Historical Society (Russkoe istoricheskoe obshchestvo, Leningrad, 1887-1916); the Transactions and proceedings of the Japan Society at London, thirty-nine volumes for the years 1892-1914; a handwritten order book from the Civil War period. In it the military orders received and given by Captain Wilmot Gibbes de Saussure from December 27, 1860 until April 30, 1861 are listed, and this unique document may well cause the historians to rewrite the accounts of the Fort Sumter campaign; the art journals, Die christliche Kunst (1905-37) and Rivista d'arte (1903-53); critical editions of the complete works of the composers, Jean Pierre Rameau, Petr Il'ich Chaikovskii, and Nikolai A. Rimskii-Korsakov; the forty-one volume critical edition of Victor Hugo's complete works, issued by Imprimerie Nationale of Paris; the entire run of the Giornale dantesco together with its predecessor L'Alighieri; microcard reprints for the entire run of Linnaea, Ein Journal für die Botanik, and a reprint in bookform of the nine volumes of Alexander Zahlbruckner's Catalogus lichenum universalis; the two series, with about one hundred volumes, of the Fossilium catalogus, greatly in demand by geologists, botanists and zoologists; substantial portions of the series headed by the Neues Jahrbuch für Mineralogie, Geologie und Palaontologie; the physics and mathematics sections of the Pisa academy publications (Pisa, Scuola Normale Superiore. Annali.); The Journal of Scientific Instruments; the entire series of Internationale Revue der gesamten Hydrobiologie, in fifty-nine volumes. Because of their uniqueness in this country, two smaller items may finally be mentioned in the group of outstanding acquisitions. Jacob Frischlin's defense of his more famous brother, the humanist scholar and dramatist Nicodemus Frischlinus redivivus, (Strassburg, 1599); the other is a short-lived German periodical, Prometheus, published at Vienna in 1808 and having among its contributors Goethe, the brothers Schlegel and Beethoven.

Some important additions to the Rare Book Room, 1957-1958, are the following:

INCUNABULA

Eusebius Cremonensis.

Epistola ad Damasum de morte Hieronymi. Blaubeuren, Conrad Manecz,
ca. 1475
A fine German incunabulum, very rare.

Tristan de Leonnois.

Le Roman du noble Tristan. Touen, Jean de Bourgeois, 1489.

Jacobus de Gruytrode.

Lavacrum conscientiae omnium sacerdotum. Leipzig, Conrad Kachelofen, 1497.

Antonius de Bitonto.

Sermones Fratris Antonii de Bitonto . . . de observantia super epistolas dominicales per totum annum. Venice, Johannes Hamman, for Nicolaus de Frankfordia, June 17, 1496.

Hermes Trismegistus.

Liber de potestate et sapientia Dei. Translated by Marsilius Ficinus. Venice, Damianus de Mediolano de Gorgonzola, May 10, 1493.

Bible. Latin.

Biblia Sacra. Venice, Simon Bibilaqua, 1494.

Codex Lindisfarnensis.

This complete facsimile edition of the Lindisfarne Gospels, from the original manuscript in the British Museum, was published in Switzerland by Urs. Graf-Verlag. The manuscript was written and illuminated by Eadfrith, Bishop of Lindisfarne, from A.D. 698 to 721. "Its Anglo-Saxon interlinear gloss, written in the tenth century, is one of the longest, most difficult and most important of Anglo-Saxon texts."

Mather, Cotton

Magnalia Christi Americana: or, the ecclesiastical history of New-England, from its first planting in the year 1620 unto the year of our Lord, 1698. In seven books. London: Printed for Thomas Parkhurst, 1702. This is the first edition of Cotton Mather's most important literary work. It is a landmark in the history of American letters.

Bible. Manuscripts, Latin. N. T. Gospels. Codex Aureus Monacensis. Der Codex Aureus der Bayerischen Staatsbibliothek in Munchen. Hrsg. von Georg Leidinger. Munchen, H. Schmidt [1921-1925]. Der Codex Aureus, or Golden Book of the Gospels, was written about 870. The work was sponsored by Charles II, 823-877, Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire. Most of the illuminations, which were added later, are concerned with the events in the life of Charles II. This facsimile edition is in 11 volumes containing descriptive text and 253 plates in color and gold.

Blake, William

William Blake's Illustrations to the Bible. Clairvaux, (France) The Trianon Press, 1957.

The series of nearly 200 Bible illustrations, produced during Blake's middle years, has never before been brought together in one volume. Blake considered his Bible illustrations to be among his most important work.

Our outlying units report steady growth and development of services, particularly where we have been able to improve staffing. The Botany Library, provided now with half the time of a professional librarian has brought card records up to date, has organized new records of serials and has improved considerably numerous parts of the collections. The Business Administration and Economics Library carried a heavy burden of public service while its librarian, Miss Charlotte Georgi, in addition to managing this activity, set a new high in professional productivity with no less than five published contributions. Miss Georgi is also to be highly commended for her energy and initiative in accomplishing the complete integration of the Business Administration-Social Sciences Division during the last month of the fiscal year. The Geology Library has continued to grow in service and materials despite an impossible space problem. This Library is undoubtedly our most critical space problem. Its materials are chiefly serial in nature and they continue to pour from the presses; the numbers of students increase steadily, but the space is fixed. The Music Library has maintained a high level of development. In books, music, records, and equipment, its growth justifies pride. We have one of the most notable music libraries of the Southeastern region, thanks to the constant attention of Professor Glen Haydon and our able Music Librarian, Keith Mixer. This has been the last year of the Sociology-Anthropology-City Planning Library. Constant pressure for improving the availability and service of materials in this Library led to the decision to bring its materials into a central service area in the Wilson Library. The Psychology Library was also closed at the end of the year for similar reasons. The specific and discrete materials of City Planning were retained as an office collection within the City Planning Department, on extended loan from the main library. The Zoology Library enjoyed the reinvigorating experience of professional direction through the tender ministrations of Mrs. Betty Zouck, whose time is divided between this Library and that of Botany. Professional direction for those two libraries has clearly been a great gain; it is hoped that in the near future we may be able to provide full-time direction to each of these units.

The activities of our staff above and beyond the call of normal duty hours are far too numerous to acknowledge individually. Suffice it to say that the University Library is singularly blessed by more than the usual proportion of notable staff. We must report with regret, but with pride in their growth, the loss of two long-time members of the staff, Dr. William R. Pullen, who moved up to the Directorship of the Georgia State College of Business Administration Library, and Mr. I. T. Littleton, who has become the Chief of Technical Processes at the North Carolina State College Library. On the other hand the Library has added Mr. Earl A. Forrest, former Assistant Chief of Acquisitions at Ohio State as Chief of the Acquisitions Department, and Dr. Harry Bergholz, as Chief Bibliographer to strengthen our Collection building and purchasing program. Highly valued improvement in our Personnel systems is a direct credit to Mrs. Elizabeth J. Thomson, who joined us mid-year to work in this field. Our weekly news bulletin has faithfully recorded in detail the numerous lesser assignments and reassignments, as well as many minor changes in organization and operations. It would be patently impossible for me to even name all of the persons who have aided our work this year; they are far too numerous to list, and some would certainly be unwittingly neglected. It may serve to publicly acknowledge my own great personal debt and the warm appreciation of the Library as a whole for the devotion of all those who love it. As for myself, my fondest hope is that its steady growth, will surmount all obstacles or deficiencies in the future as it has in the past.

To the Dean of the Faculty, James L. Godfrey

I have the honor to submit the Annual Report for the fiscal year July 1, 1958 to June 30, 1959, the 164th year of the University Library's history, and the second year under this administration.

In this second year the record will reveal a period of sensing and moving in new directions, a period of flexing the muscles of new or newly formed organisms, a period of unusual expansion of services or concepts of service. At the same time, cold statistics and even warm phrases cannot reveal the soul-searching travail of numbers of people caught up in the seemingly inexorable mill of growth and change. For many, the usual quiet homespun way of life, so free of change or troubles, had become more than a prized possession, rather an imperative need. Because of this, the rapid pace of development in the Library's functions and organization created grave problems for some. For others, the same developments opened bright new vistas of a renaissance in this institution's historical growth. For our using public, the Faculty, Students of all classes, and others, the crude numbers tell an impressive story of measurable growth. It may now be proper to say that we have lived through very trying periods of examination, experimentation, and re-examination, with the resultant organism much stronger, more solidly based on current concepts, and with every reason to look forward with valid justification to a very bright future.

The principal physical changes of this year include the transfer of the Art Library to new, well-planned quarters in the Ackland building, the renovation and re-equipping of the Graduate Seminar in Wilson, and the transfer of the Photoduplication Laboratory to its greatly enlarged new quarters adjacent to the Bull's Head Bookshop.

The transfer of the Photoduplication Laboratory's vacated space was urgently needed to enlarge the quarters of the Rare Book Room. The very considerable additions in recent years in the Hanes Collection, the Hoyt Collection, the Shaw Collection and many others can now be readily accommodated with ample space for growth. In addition to more than doubling book shelving space, the Rare Book Room now has a number of small research study areas which will serve visiting scholars very well.

With the establishment of the Undergraduate Library in new space, the former General College area has served to provide a separate smoking and group study area, thus increasing and improving space available for Reserve reading assignments. An indirect gain was made in grouping the principal space used by lower division students on the first floor level of Wilson. This should relieve some of the pressure on upper class space needs on the second level.

Planning went forward for two new library areas now under construction, one in the new Pharmacy building and the other for Physics-Math-Statistics in the new addition to Phillips Hall. Both of these units will go into service in the coming year.

A major gain in personnel management was made following a long series of conferences with the State Personnel Department. Position classification specifications were established and all positions of clerical and sub-professional nature in the Library were analyzed and classified. Our own University Personnel Office staff and representatives of the State Department were uniformly cooperative and helpful. Concrete advances were also made in clarifying the essential need for maintaining the academic direction of all professional library personnel under local management. We may now reasonably hope for final resolution of this matter in the course of the coming fiscal year.

Our business and technical operations have survived, but barely, a very difficult period of expanded acquisitions and cataloging without expanded personnel numbers. I am certain the Chiefs in these areas join hands with me in offering a silent prayer of thanksgiving for the improvement recently achieved in personnel manning. A decision of the Administrative Board of the Library at mid-year to re-allocate some $20,000 in book funds to the departments resulted in a sizeable increase in the number of monographs received in the reported period. Certain major additions to the collections will be reported in detail below. Tables recording statistics of money expended for books, journals, and library material together with records of cataloging production are included among the appendices.

In the area of public service this has been a most eventful year. Our new Divisions record a banner year of reference services; the Interlibrary Center has established its true position as a state-wide service agency with complete interlocking cooperation with other interrelated libraries.

This year, as in the year before it, the Library has had its liberal share of the trials and tribulations which are a natural concomitant of institutional expansion and resultant change. For the boundless patience and good will of your administration the staff of the Library and I owe you boundless appreciation. Such success as the Library may have now and in the future depends to a larger degree than many realize upon just such understanding and willingness to face tough issues to reach goals of importance to all of us. For myself, the character of administrative direction I have known under President William Friday, Chancellor William Aycock, and yourself, has been keenly appreciated to a degree approached only by the heart-warming and paternal guidance so gently provided by my ever-youthful mentor, Dr. L. R. Wilson.

I cannot fail to record my appreciation for the earnest labors of so many of the Library staff during this past year. The Administrative Board members this year considered serious problems and labored diligently in the interests of fundamental library policies. Our public, Faculty and Student body have been both patient and tolerant. For all of these indications of good will I surely can speak for the entire Library in saying we take our satisfaction and pride in doing for you.

Services

Although many of the services of a University Library cannot be recorded statistically, and many unrecorded services are taken for granted, the actual record of transactions helps to evaluate the performance of the Library and its staff. Simple circulation figures tend normally to follow the trend in growth of student numbers very naturally when types of use remain unchanged. Following this line of reasoning, our circulation should increase proportionately as the student body increases. On the other hand, conversion to open shelf access for all users leads to increased use at the shelves, and correspondingly fewer recorded circulations. This year the main library stacks have been open to all for the last three months of the year. Also pertinent is the establishment of the Undergraduate Library and the very considerable expansion of the College collection on open shelves in that library. Notwithstanding these two major factors which should have reduced the statistics of loans, the numbers recorded in Appendix VII reveal an overall increase in circulation of 13.8% in 1958/59. The central desk load moved from 132,874 to 167,749. The former General College record of 66,543 moved up to the current 86,313 in the Undergraduate Library. It appears from this evidence that making books more readily accessible also encourages recorded borrowing. A most important increase should be noted in the numbers of books borrowed in the BA/SS Division as compared with the loans of the three units (Current Affairs, Business Administration, and Documents) which merged into it this year. The increase amounts to approximately 35%. Staff serving in this Division are very much aware of the intensified level of use to which its materials are now being subjected. There have been substantial increases in loans among the special and professional libraries, with the greatest increase occurring quite naturally in the Art Library where new library quarters have substantially improved the availability of art library materials and services.

The Circulation Department has not had quite as much of a wholesale moving chore this year. Some shifting was necessary to accommodate relocated materials. All microfilm materials have been brought together and a new space organized for their use. Some periodical files have been moved for utmost convenience to the Undergraduate Library shelves. The Circulation staff has attacked some of its more pressing problems with notable success. A new system for discharge and shelving has been inaugurated. Thoughtful attention has been given to new problems arising from the opening of the stacks. We still maintain the open stacks but certain modifications in the procedures will be tried in the near future.

The Undergraduate Library has undoubtedly been the most successful innovation of recent years. Younger students have taken to it very quickly and appear to be highly pleased with its services. Combined with the spaces for Reserve Reading and group discussion on the first floor, this new arrangement automatically accomplishes a ready separation of upper and lower level students without any apparent strain.

The overall increase in loans, 494,980 as compared with 434,959 last year, represents an actual 13.8% rise. To us this spells no phenomenal gain, rather the normal and expected growth of a healthy library in a healthy academic climate. Any improvement in library use is a direct reflection of improvement in instruction and academic administration.

Borrowing from and lending to other institutions is often a useful index to the character of services rendered and also to the nature of a library's collections. Our loans to other institutions, 4,623 this fiscal year, signal the steadily improving quality of our book collection. Last year we loaned 4,062. However, an even greater change appears in the number of our borrowings — 2,361 compared with 1,693 last year. This shows a rapid increase in research needs for materials not yet available in our own collections. It also points to a progressive trend to more serious research among many more of our upper level students and faculty.

Another useful guide to the work of a library is the extent of informational guidance provided. The record of service shown in Appendix IX reveals again sizeable increases in use. While the greatest increases appear in the Humanities and BA/SS Divisions, the report for all libraries represents a 27% increase over last year. This trend speaks well for the newly organized divisional reading rooms in their first full year of use.

The auxiliary services of the Photolab and the Bull's Head Bookshop have continued along their usual paths, meeting some of the extra-routine needs of our academic community. The major change in the Photolab was the move to larger and more suitable quarters. The major changes in the Bull's Head resulted from personnel change. Mrs. Jessica Valentine, for many years a tradition in our Bookshop moved to a new and better-paid position as head of the Bryn Mawr College Bookshop where she can also be nearer to her family. Her place has been most ably filled by Mrs. Helen B. Hogan, transferred in from the former Current Affairs Reading Room. Mrs. Hogan, in her first year, has made a number of judicious changes in policies and program, designed in every case to enable the bookshop to sharpen its effects upon our primary patron, the University student. Within its carefully prescribed limits, the Bull's Head Bookshop is serving an admirable function. We are constantly questioned by other leading institutional libraries about the purposes and methods of the bookshop, and in at least one major institution, the University of Illinois, a comparable bookshop is being considered.

The North Carolina Collection has maintained steady increases in services and collections. Its staff and materials represent a state-wide activity in research and information, going far beyond the usual demands of a university library. Especially notable additions to the Collections have been made through the Cotten Fund and the considerable gift of books and manuscripts by our devoted Friend of the Library, Mr. Preston Davie, of New York.

The Rare Book Room has recorded healthy growth in numbers of research patrons. With important additions to the Hoyt Collection following his death, and with the beginning of cataloging of the Shaw Collections, a pressing need for more space became increasingly evident. With the new space gained by relocation of the Photographic Laboratory, the Rare Book Room will undoubtedly attract increased use and new donors. For the first time, all Rare Books and materials which require supervised use are now housed and serviced in one place. Toward the end of the year, Mr. James Hanes, of Winston-Salem brought us his assurance of his family's continuing interest in the Hanes Collection. The concrete results of this renewed interest are now coming in and will be faithfully recorded in full in the next Annual Report.

Dr. James W. Patton has continued his indefatigable search for manuscript collections covering all of the Southeast, and this year resulting in the addition of 133 manuscript groups numbering some 33,000 items. The internal workings of the Manuscripts Department differ from most in that its patrons are always research workers and the materials handled require very special treatment. Many letters of inquiry are received and each inquiry into manuscript material requires painstakingly detailed study. Despite the difficulties, the renown of our manuscript collections continues to thrive, with each year seeing more intensive use. The statistical appendices report in detail the growth and use of the Special Collections; narrative annual reports of each are maintained in the Librarian's Office.

Growth and Organization of the Collections

The University Library's collections this year reached ever closer to the million mark, totalling 978,558 on July 1, 1959. The Library will add its millionth volume in the course of the next fiscal year. This year, in the face of unchanging second biennial year funding, we have been increasingly aware of the inadequacy of book funds available to meet current needs and current book production. At mid-year the Administrative Board faced this problem and voted to re-allocate a large portion of Research book funds to the subject departments. With ever-rising prices of journals and books, and to serve a steadily increasing number of research and teaching needs, it is imperative that the Library find some way of improving very considerably its funding for building the collections.

With the funds we have, the meticulous attention of the faculty to their judicious expenditure, the thoughtful considerations of the Research Committee of the Board, and the quiet but omnipresent attentions of Dr. Harry Bergholz, the University Library can proudly report steady progress in acquiring notable items among its additions.

From among the Library's acquisitions during the past year, the following may be singled out as especially noteworthy: the long series of publications, issued at Rome by the Accademia Dei Lincei since 1870, is now very nearly complete. The Comptes-Rendus, or Papers, of the Paris Académie des inscriptions et belles-lettres (the so-called "Petite Académie," well-known particularly for its contributions to comparative mythology, the history of ancient science and French archaeology), insofar as they were published since the beginning of this century, have been obtained in their entirety. 124 volumes of the GAZETTE DES BEAUX-ARTS, leading art journal of the past century and still ranking very high for the twentieth, have been added to the Library's holdings, leaving but a few minor gaps in the run still to be filled. A copy of the Insel Verlag's limited edition of the BAMBERGER APOKALYPSE manuscript reproduction on 59 large folio plates in four colors, gold and silver, has gone into our Rare Book Room. So have five more volumes of early Icelandic manuscripts in facsimile, belonging to the CORPUS CODICUM ISLANDICORUM MEDII AEVI and magnificently produced by the Copenhagen publishing firm Ejnar Munksgaard. The two luxuriously printed and illustrated volumes entitled MUSHROOMS, RUSSIA AND HISTORY (New York, 1957) by Valentina P. Wasson and R. Gordon Wasson.

Other noteworthy acquisitions appealing to somewhat more specialized interests are the following: the six-volume catalog of the Avery Architectural Library in the new 1958 edition. Personnel

The current year has been one of extraordinary stability in professional staff change. We have had some losses through retirement, family relocation, and professional advancement, but very few in comparison with many comparable libraries. Some additions to the staff have been made, but adjustments in professional staff have been cared for chiefly by reassignment and promotion from within.

Miss Mary Lindsay Thornton retired from her position as Head of the North Carolina Collection after completing more than forty-one years of faithful service to The University Library. She plans to continue her research in North Carolina history looking toward other publications to add to her already noteworthy personal contributions, especially in North Carolina Bibliography. Mr. William Powell, formerly Assistant to Miss Thornton, has been promoted to the position which she vacated.

Mrs. Jessica B. Valentine, for many years managing head of the Bull's Head Bookshop resigned in July of 1958 to accept a better position at Bryn Mawr College. Her vacancy was swiftly filled by the transfer of Mrs. Helen B. Hogan, another able business manager and bookman. The transition has been smoothly made without any interruption or delay of service. The Bull's Head remains the same warm, inviting refuge for book-minded students and faculty it was designed to serve.

Mrs. Elizabeth J. Thomson left the position of Personnel Assistant at the end of 1958, when her husband moved away to a new position. Her groundwork in our personnel systems represented a major contribution to our personnel management. The subsequent mechanization of our non-professional personnel through the State Personnel Department has led us to hold this position vacant against future need.

Mrs. Adriana P. Orr resigned as Professional Assistant in the Humanities Division to accompany her husband in his new work in Raleigh, North Carolina. Her vacancy was filled by the confirmed assignment of Mrs. Joan Eaton in the same division.

Both Mr. I. T. Littleton and Dr. William R. Pullen, whose official departure dates lie in this fiscal year, were reported in the Annual Report of 1957/58, since their new assignments were well-known at that time.

The principal gains for the professional staff are in the persons of Mr. Earl A. Forrest, new Chief of the Acquisitions Department, and Miss Pauline Tekesky, Chief of the Interlibrary Center. Mr. Forrest brings an enviable record of experience in Acquisitions work at the Ohio State University and the University of Illinois. Miss Tekesky brings a wealth of pertinent experience in the Cleveland Public Library system, Special Library work in New York and Information Library work in Latin America. We look for growth in both of these able people and the functions which they supervise.

Physical Facilities

This University Library is singularly blessed by the foresight and care which have led to an eminently rational complex of library units to serve a highly complex group of academic needs. In our planning for the future, every possible effort has been and will be made to continue the pattern.

As presently organized, the University Library consists of the Wilson Library, devoted essentially to the Humanities and Social Sciences, with the Physical Sciences served primarily in branch libraries close to their users. In addition to this, there are all of the medical-related fields served by the Health Affairs Library and one branch in Pharmacy, and the Law School which has its own separate library. In the physical sciences, Botany, Chemistry, Geology-Geography, Math-Physics, and Zoology are served by their respective units as named. Fine Arts must also be recorded, now being served by a handsome new Art Library in Ackland, and a notable collection, poorly housed in Hill Hall for music.

As the University grows, flexes its muscles, and stretches out in one direction or another, so the libraries must seek to anticipate and be prepared to serve well at all stages of this growth. With this in mind, and with the clear evidence of parallel kinds of growth in comparable institutions, we have marked out a number of goals for planning. Sites have been earmarked, and movements initiated, where possible, to help us attain these goals in good time and place. On every hand we have encountered only the most friendly and thoughtful eagerness to plan for the future on the part of your administration, the faculty, and even the students, through their library committee.

To carry the Wilson Library into its key place in this pattern, determined efforts must be made to obtain an Undergraduate Library to the East and a Special Collections Library to the West. The astronomical analogy is correct, for this will place the rising new generation of students where the sun rises, and the mature research-minded student and faculty, our historical and ancient inheritance on the side of the setting sun.

In the sciences, new construction will be determined by the respective crises in one science or another as they swiftly unfold, and more particularly for library planning, as their inter-relationships increase or depart one from the other. All reasonable efforts must be bent toward judicious gathering of related units into stronger, more useful cooperative library organisms. Thus Zoology and Botany might well look toward combined library services, with the possibility of Geology being included. Physics, Mathematics and Statistics are now served by one library; in the more distant future, thought may be given to designing new buildings to enable Chemistry to join with them. As the area studies and the natural inter-relationships of Geography with the Social Sciences grow to require more extensive service, it seems evident that the Map Collections so important to their work and related book materials will find a larger and more inviting area in the Wilson Library. When the Undergraduate and Special Collections are served in their own especially designed buildings, suitable quarters for the Geographers will not be difficult in Wilson.

The Health Affairs Library is presently suffering from a sort of double pneumonia, choking in the juices of its materials and users. It is now past time to push for a central facility of truly sound capacity for the load this library must carry. The Medical School, the ever-increasing research staff, and the medical staff of all of the service areas represent an enormous task for what was initially designed for the modest beginnings of only a few years back. New, centrally located space within a new building is the only way to properly meet present and future needs.

All of the above planning envisions essentially new construction. At this date, some of these plans are already underway. Somewhere ahead, however, there must also be imaginative and vigorous consideration of improving and maintaining what we have. Every square foot of space in existing facilities must be scrutinized and matched up with current needs to attain maximum utilization. Where time has dulled and begrimed our walls, fresh paint or new color may bring renewed life. Where dust and darkness prevail, thorough house-cleaning and bright light may retrieve long-lost space. No longer is it possible to placidly contemplate walls in public view untouched by broom or paintbrush for thirty years. Much has been accomplished in recovering the past, but much more can be done.

The foregoing account of our libraries, their recent past, the present, and the future includes cause for great pride, some regrets, and shining hope. As I see it, the University and its Library stand on the threshold of the brightest hope we have ever known. In resources and resourcefulness, in growth and planning for growth, in understanding and acceptance, we in the Library have enjoyed and hope to continue to enjoy the finest cooperation of our public and our administration. If ever elsewhere one could find a healthier climate for progress, it would be beyond my power to imagine it. For this I am certain my words can speak for all of the staff in expressing our appreciation for our administration's continuing attentions and determined efforts to make our best work possible.
